The Chas. Stallman family, who have been occupying the Mrs. May Beardsley ranch on Johnson Ave., left yesterday for Loomis, where he has leased his brother's ranch. Service Men Given Big Banquet

The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of Campbell lodges took the initiative in an organized action for entertaining the boys of the community who have come home from service.

About two dozen of the boys were royally entertained at a sumptuous banquet served by the ladies.

An informal program followed, at which Judge P. F. Gosbey was the principal speaker. Solos were furnished by Amos Williams, A. J. Triggwell, B. Reed, and Miss Clara Pope, assisted by Bert Marquart at the piano. Miss Winnie Grizzle gave a recitation.

The informality of the occasion did much to make all the boys feel at home and get better acquainted with their neighbors. Such affairs on the local scale are more enjoyable and promote the brotherly spirit much more than do the larger formal affairs and the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are to be commended for their good work in this line.

Insect Control Lecture

Mr. Thos. O. McClure of Oakland will address an open meeting of Orchard City Grange in Campbell next Tuesday evening at the lecture hour. His subject will be "Insect Control", a most interesting topic to all fruit growers, especially so now that the products bring such fancy prices.

In order that those interested may hear this address an invitation is extended to others outside the membership.

There will be special music and everyone is cordially invited to hear Miss Palmer, who is a most interesting speaker.

Don't Grope in the Dark

Groping in the dark, psychologically viewed, is bad mental regime, it doesn't get one anywhere. Physically considered, the same practice often leads one where one doesn't care to go, for instance, into skin-contusing collisions with the household furniture of moonless nights, and it is to this latter aspect of the case, or rather, to an antidote for such an one, that we ask your attention just now.

Please consider for a moment, as a remedy for groping in the dark, the Ingersol Radiolite Pendant, Tack, and Adhesive, more briefly called, in the Ingersol nation-wide advertising campaign, "Ingersolite Locaters." You know the principle of the Radiolite Watch, you have seen the figures that shine in the night, and so you can understand how these Locaters may be seen in the darkness in a similar way. The glowing Pendant should be fastened to your electric light cord or chain; the glistening Tack will show the location of your wall-switch; and the star-like Adhesive Button can be fastened to anything that you may wish to find or avoid, such as a bottle of medicine, or of poison, in the dark.

Ponder deeply the value, in bruises avoided, in time saved, in temper spared, of these Ingersolite Locaters. You never thought of such a thing, did you? Thus is seen the wit of the inventor; for to fill an expressed want is comparatively easy, but to touch a hidden spring in some one else's nature so that a want bobs up in full apparition, like an unexpected "Jack in the Box," is genius superlative. And another thing, as advertising is expensive and these Locaters are a small item, we shall be money out unless every reader of this buys at least one, some will want several. The price, 25c, is an absurdly small investment, in view of the large convenience.

Harp Long In Use.

Jubal is credited with the invention of the harp, 3,875 years before Christ, and sacred writ tells of David playing the harp before Saul 1003 B. C. It is related in ancient manuscript that the harp was in use in Ireland during the time of Golde, monarch of Ireland, about 850 B. C.

"What Next?"

Los Angeles.—Hey, diddle, diddle and that old-fashioned yarn about the high jumping cow may be true after all. Jim Jeffries brought his prize Holstein calf to the stock show in an airplane.

Eugene, Ore.—Home nursing and care of children will be taught in the domestic science department of the University of Oregon, according to announcement of Miss Lillian Tingle, head of that department.

Portland, Ore.—Mrs. V. B. Fisher of San Francisco pleaded guilty before Judge Wolverton in the federal court to the charge of importing some thirty pints of whisky in her trunk. She was fined $250.

New York.—Appeal to Presbyterians throughout the country for an expression of opinion on the question of granting women equal rights with men in all the functions of the church, was issued by the committee on official relations of women in the church.

San Francisco.—The "standing room only" sign is being displayed in the Internal Revenue Department at the Custom House nowadays. For this is the time to file declarations of intention to make not more than 200 gallons of wine for home consumption. And the office of Justus S. Wardell, collector of internal revenue, is doing a rushing business. From the shades of the 700 wineries that existed before war-time prohibition, more than 7000 will spring under the special dispensation, it is estimated.

Glacier Point.—Prince Leopold, heir apparent to the Belgian throne, camped one night on the top of Sentinel Peak, far above the Yosemite Valley. He climbed (?) the four-mile trail up the mountain side on the back of a pony, accompanied by Major W. W. Hoffman. Their tent was pitched on a plateau and they were guided to a mountain stream, where they caught trout for their supper. The prince tramped (?) happily over the trails, wearing cowboy chaps, a flannel shirt and a white handkerchief knotted around his neck.

Boston.—Discovery of a "human junk heap" was announced by officers of the house of correction at Deer Island. Charles W. Buzzell of Montreal, serving a sentence of one year for forgery, complained of indigestion. A surgical operation resulted in the recovery of two pounds of miscellaneous from his stomach. The collection, Dr. L. C. Rockwell said, included parts of a dog chain two feet long, a safety razor blade, nearly whole; a suspender buckle and 179 fragments of glass, hay wire, staples, nails and screws. Relieved of these substances, Russell has almost entirely recovered, it is said. The prisoner had been accumulating the collection with suicidal intent, according to Dr. Rockwell, since last December.

TEN THOUSAND NURSES WITH ARMY IN FRANCE

Washington.—Army nurses who served overseas during the war had their share of service and suffering. This is shown in the final report by Miss Julia C. Stimson, acting director, who headed the army nursing service abroad. Between May 8, 1917, and May 31, 1919, 10,245 nurses of a total of 21,480 enlisted for the war saw service overseas. Three were wounded in action and 266 died on duty.

The first six detachments in France replaced nurses in British hospitals. Following up service in the base hospitals, American nursing detachments also began to go forward, and in December, 1917, General Haig mentioned a number of them in dispatches for gallant service.

But the real work of the American women commenced July 18, 1918, when the final German attack was stemmed and the great victorious allied offensive started.

"From July 18 to November 11, the amount of work done was such that no praise would be great enough," Miss Stimson says. "It was not at all uncommon for nurses to work 14 to 18 hours a day, and some hospitals with only seventy or eighty nurses cared for patients to the number of 2100. One hospital and 5000 patients at one time with seventy nurses to take care of them. Officers, nurses, and men worked themselves to their limit of physical endurance."

On Armistice Day, 184,421 American soldiers, sick and wounded, were in hospitals, and there was a shortage of 6925 nurses. The records showed that the "peak" of wounded was actually reached at Meuse center on November 16, where 20,186 patients were taken into ten hospitals, with 394 nurses assigned.

Congress must pass laws whereby business will know where it's going, how it is going to get there, and how long it can stay after it arrives.—Ole Hanson.

The bridegroom is employed by the Peninsula Rapid Transit Company here. The elopement caused no little surprise to the friends of the young couple in San Mateo and Burlingame.

STOKES HELD FOR MURDER OF PHYSICIAN

"He Was Breaking Up My Home," Engineers' Complaint to Police

Los Angeles.—Shortly after a coroner's jury October 15 found that Dr. Ernest B. Roberts of Sawtelle, near this city, came to his death "by a bullet wound in the brain, inflicted by Charles L. Stokes," the Los Angeles county grand jury returned an indictment charging Stokes with first degree murder.

Stokes, a mechanical engineer, was taken into custody when he telephoned the police from the home of a relative and is said to have told them that he killed Dr. Roberts when the latter told him he had stolen the love of Stokes' wife.

The shooting, according to Stokes' alleged confession, followed his unexpected return home and the discovery of Roberts leaving the house. The two men were riding in an automobile in which Stokes, after a fist encounter with Roberts at the former's home, agreed to take the physician home, according to the testimony at the inquest. The fight was renewed during the ride and the automobile ran into a ditch, overturned and caught fire. The two men were thrown out. Roberts fled and Stokes fired at the physician's form, dimly outlined by the glare of flames, according to the alleged confession.

William Littell, a detective, testified at the inquest that Stokes said he killed Roberts.

"He was breaking up my home," Stokes added, according to Littell.

AMERICANS WON TO BOLSHEVISM

Russian Says 90 Per Cent of Troops Sympathize With Reds

San Francisco.—"Fully 90 per cent of the American soldiers who return from service in Siberia are secret Bolsheviks and in sympathy with the Bolshevik cause in Russia," says Captain Nicholas F. Romanoff, who says he recently came to the United States to obtain the recognition of the United States for the Kolchak government at Omsk. Captain Romanoff says he is the official representative of and personal aid to General Gregor Semionoff, head of the Cossack forces in Eastern Siberia, with headquarters at Chita.

Captain Romanoff says he has been in Washington for the last three weeks and that he had interviews with State Department representatives in charge of Russian affairs. No promise of immediate recognition of Kolchak was made, he admitted.

He said at the Hotel St. Francis that Americans were very unpopular in Siberia. So much so, he went on, that if an American is met by Russians in a dark street the American is likely to receive a severe beating. To be popular, he declared, the American government should furnish Kolchak with arms and money with which to fight the Bolsheviks.

Romanoff visited Dean David P. Barrows of the University of California, who was a former chief of the Intelligence Section in Siberia. Romanoff is a former private in the American army and was a civilian employee in Siberia under Colonel Barrows.

Wear Grass Dresses.

People in some of the villages of southern Russia are wearing dresses made of leaves or grass sewn together with bamboo fiber, owing to the difficulty in obtaining cloth, says Major G. M. Towse, who is in charge of Red Cross activities along the shores of the Black Sea. "It is an ideal costume for the summer, when southern Russia has a temperature like that of the Garden of Eden," said Major Towse, "but I shiver when I think of what will happen to those little girls when the snow begins to fly."

Checking a Poet.

The young man rolled his eyes as he entered the editorial sanctum. "Here is a poem which you may publish in your paper. I dashed it off in an idle moment and you will perhaps find it a little rough. You can make any correction you please." "Thank you," said the editor. "I will give you a check for it at once." "You are very kind. I shall be delighted."

The editor handed him a check. "Many thanks," said the poet. "I will bring you some more poems." He had reached the door when suddenly he turned. "Excuse me, but you've forgotten to fill up this check." "Oh, that's all right," said the editor. "I have given you a check in its rough state, as it were. You can make any correction you please." —Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Inspecting Army Supplies Offered for Sale in Washington

District of Columbia food inspectors took no chances with the army supplies which were offered for sale in Washington. They examined every can and every box with the same thoroughness with which they guard every source of food supply in the capital.

Do You Know That--

Alabaster is so called from "Alabastion," in Upper Egypt, where it abounds.

The dahlia is a native of Mexico, and was taken to England for the first time at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

Among Eastern nations the turquoise is held in high repute against the evil eye, and it is quite probable that its popularity in the West dates from the Crusades.

Trees of the Sapindus, or soap-berry order, grow in the north of Africa. They are amazingly prolific and their fruit contains about 30 per cent of saponin.

A cedar tree requires more than a century to grow large enough to yield a 30-foot telephone pole. The eucalyptus will attain a larger growth in 30 years, and its wood is quite as durable.

It is believed that the magnolia was named after Magnol de Montpelier. There is more sunshine in Spain than in any other country in Europe. Its yearly average is 3,000 hours.

Nine Men Comprised First Graduating Class, in 1642, at Old Harvard College

In 1642, on the 9th of August, the first commencement at Harvard college took place. The college had been proposed in 1636 by the general court of Massachusetts, Cambridge, which was then called Newton, was selected as the site. Two years later a bequest of $3,700 was left by Rev. John Harvard, a non-conformist minister, for the erection of the college building. His library of 320 books was given to form a nucleus for the college library. John Harvard died on the 26th of September in 1633, and, in accordance with his desire, the erection of the building was immediately started. In December of the same year the first class was entered. The graduating class of 1642 consisted of nine men.

SHORT AND SNAPPY

There is no science in love; it's all art. Scandal continues to be a fashionable game. A pug dog acts as if he might be vain of his ugliness. A woman's fickleness is only exceeded by her constancy. A bird in the hand is all right if you have no knife and fork. The diver has a practical way of getting at the bottom of things.

Three Partners and Story of Origin of the Bramble

There is an amusing story told of the origin of the bramble. There were once three partners engaged in the wool trade. They loaded a ship with a large cargo, but it was wrecked and the firm became bankrupt. All resorted to metamorphosis for protection. One partner became the bat, and so skulked about until midnight to avoid his creditors; the second became a cormorant, and is forever diving into the deep to discover the foundered vessel; while the third became the bramble bush that sits by the roadside and seizes hold of every passing sheep to make up his loss by theft.

Both Rich and Poor Have Tendency to Be on Watch for Faults of the Other

For indeed the fact is, that there are idle poor and idle rich; and there are busy poor and busy rich. Many a beggar is as lazy as if he had ten thousand years; and many a man of large fortune is busier than his errand boy, and would never think of stopping in the street to play marbles. . . . There is a working class—strong and happy—among both rich and poor; there is an idle class—weak, wicked, and miserable—among both rich and poor. And the worst of the misunderstandings arising between the two orders come of the unlucky fact that the wise of one class habitually contemplate the foolish of the other. If the busy rich people watched and rebuked the idle rich people, all would be right; and if the busy poor watched and rebuked the idle poor people, all would be right. But each class has a tendency to look for the faults of the other.—Ruskin.

HILLS

I never loved your plains!—Your gentle valleys, Your drowsy country lanes And pleached alleys.

I want my hills—the trail That scorns the hollow, Up, up the ragged shale Where few will follow.

Up, over wooded crest And mossy boulder With strong thigh, heavy chest And swinging shoulder.

So let me hold my way, By nothing halted, Until, at close of day, I stand, exalted.

High on my hills of dream—Dear hills that know me! And then, how fair will seem The lands below me.

How pure, at vesper time, The far bells chiming! God give me hills to climb, And strength for climbing! —From Current Opinion.

Some of Brainiest People Are in Need of Morale Most

Morale is more than brains. In fact some of the brainiest people need morale most. It seems their nervous systems are so delicately attuned that it takes little to throw them out of balance. A glance at the lives of poets and men of genius will give sufficient evidence to prove the point. And the mentally sluggish seem to be in the same class so far as the need of morale goes. They are at the other pole of progress with a bias toward the idea that the world is against them. So they just do what they have to do and complain. If half the vim were put into self-bettering effort there would be a different story to tell.

Was the First Successful Steamboat in the World

On the 17th of August, in 1807, the Clermont, the first successful steamboat in the world, made her maiden trip up the Hudson from a wharf at the foot of West Tenth street, New York, to Albany. The Clermont, built by Robert Fulton, with the financial aid and backing of Robert Livingston, was constructed at the cost of about $10,000. It made the trip of 150 miles in 32 hours running time.

Dislodging a Fishbone.

When a fishbone lodges in the throat swallow slowly the juice of a lemon. The acid in this will dissolve enough of the bone so that the remaining part will slip down easily.

THE MAN WHO

BOSSSED ROOSEVELT

In a new book entitled "Personal Memoirs of the Home Life of the late Theodore Roosevelt in Relation to Oyster Bay," written by Albert Loren Cheney, formerly Editor of the "Oyster Bay Pilot," and an old personal friend and near neighbor of Col.
Roosevelt, is shown a picture of the man whom Roosevelt acknowledged as his "boss". The compiler of the book is the father of Mrs. Ralph Stuart Clinton, who as Miss Amy B. Cheney, was secretary to Colonel Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill, and author of the story entitled, "As a Girl Saw Theodore Roosevelt." The book is filled with stirring Roosevelt incidents, and liberally illustrated with pictures of Oyster Bay and the men associated with President Roosevelt, including a picture of the grave of Mr. Roosevelt. It is told how Roosevelt "rode the goat"
in Matinecock Lodge, A. and A. M., and treats of him as soldier, governor, vice-president and president while at Oyster Bay, with a frontis-piece portrait of Lieut.-Col. Theodore Roosevelt, the Rough Rider; also an approved picture of Lieut.-Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., taken from a portrait painted while he was in France. The author announces that a share of the net proceeds from the book will be contributed to the fund for the establishment of a Roosevelt Memorial Park at Oyster Bay. The price is $2.00 and copies may be ordered direct from the Cheney Publishing Company, Washington, D. C. (Box 24).

THRIFT PROGRAM

In the interest of the future citizenry of America, we, the state superintendents of public instruction in the twelfth federal reserve district, appeal to our people to do everything in their power to discourage and check extravagance, and by precept and example to aid the schools in the teaching of thrift. We urge upon school officials and teachers the necessity for the teaching of thrift, as a patriotic duty and as a means of meeting this great social and economic crisis.

As a practical plan of procedure, we advocate the following steps:
First, the teaching of the principles of thrift as a regular part of the school program.
Second, the setting up of suitable administrative school machinery to enable and encourage children to invest in thrift and war savings stamps.

Third, the checking of extravagance
in dress among school boys and girls manifested in many ways, but especially in the purchase of silk hosiery, silk shirts, neckties and expensive footwear. To this end we recommend that school boards and teachers insist upon reasonable economy and modesty in dress and we appeal to parents and pupils to co-operate in the effort to check such extravagance.

Fourth, that thrift education be regarded as a continuous process involving habit formation that must be directed and controlled outside of school
as well as during school attendance.

Whereas, the savings of children are made in pennies, nickels and dimes,
rather than in coins of larger denominations.

Resolved, that we recommend to the federal authorities, the issuance and sale of thrift stamps of smaller denominations.

Resolved, further, that we heartily endorse the thrift and war savings stamps movement inaugurated by the federal government, and urge the congress of the United States to continue and extend the present plan
by passing appropriate legislation.

A MATTER which has long been a subject of discussion among many of the mothers, has at last received official recognition, and that is extravagant dress on the part of many school girls and boys, tho that can scarcely be said of the boys of our local schools. In their case perhaps, thrift could be practised along some other lines.

This matter of dress has been agitated on a number of occasions here, opinions varying as to the best means of checking the extravagant and unsuitable clothing worn at school and school functions.
Some advocate uniform, but the burden of opinion seems to be in favor of individual choice of style, but with limitations as to kind and material.

The subject is involved in the program for the inculcation of thrift as proposed at the conference of western school superintendents included in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District, held recently in Sacramento and San Francisco. Instead of the campaign for the purchase of Thrift and War Saving Stamps having established a habit of saving, a reaction has set in which is a menace to the future economic welfare of the youth.

A well defined program recommended by the conference appears in this issue, which should receive the endorsement of all parents, school authorities and organizations interested in the welfare of children.

that they be plain and serviceable.
Warm clothes are needed for this sea-

Nelson's Victory Cups.

Recognition of the English "silent navy" which did so much to win the war has come in the presentation of two communion cups to the Royal Naval Barracks church of Portsmouth, England. These cups were used on Nelson's flagship Victory in the battle of Trafalgar. Thus the glory that was England's in the earlier days joins hands with the glory of the present, and the spirit of Nelson is linked with the spirits of the brave men who stood by in all the long months of the North sea vigil. Nine years ago these cups were given to a church in Glasgow.
The widow of the rector of this parish now gives them to the navy as the most fitting holder of the goblets, which were made about 1890.
